

War 'Dry' Act Upheld Here In 'Wet' Suits

forces which had been called to the colors.

The second admission is, however, significant to this extent, that it concedes that the powers of Congress do not terminate at once with the cessation of hostilities, but that they include the power to restore in certain respects anyway the status quo ante bellum. It, therefore, becomes necessary to inquire how far the powers of Congress go to that end.

The real question is of the limits, after the cessation of hostilities, of the powers of Congress to unravel the results which war has caused. That it has some such powers, as I have said, cannot be denied. The forces must be demobilized, the unnecessary accumulation of supplies must be sold, the extra roads must be returned, or some other valid status given them, the ship built and building must be disposed of, contracts must be cancelled and the immense organization of workmen and factories and of machinery must be restored to the general industrial life of the nation.

"So much at least is within the powers of Congress and in the execution of them the power to restore in certain respects anyway the status quo ante bellum. It, therefore, becomes necessary to inquire how far the powers of Congress go to that end."

Supreme Court Hearing Thursday

Judge Hand added that as the Supreme Court of the United States is to be organized on the constitutionality of war-time prohibition on next Tuesday, the interests of the New York liquor dealers would not be served by their failure to win the relief asked for in this court.

The case to be heard by the United States Supreme Court on Thursday is an appeal by the government from the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City, which granted an injunction in the Kentucky case. In this injunction the judge questioned the legality of the Volstead measure.

The government had appealed from the decision of Federal Judge Arthur L. Brown granting an injunction in the Kentucky case. In this injunction the judge questioned the legality of the Volstead measure.

18,757 More Gallons of Kentucky Whisky Freed

Federal Judge Evans Permits the Sale of "Floor Stocks" by Three More Concerns

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 14.—A favorable decision on the question of three more whisky concerns seeking permission of the Federal court to sell "floor stocks" was handed down this afternoon by Judge Evans.

The concerns and the quantity of whisky they expressed a desire to sell were I. W. Bernheimer Distilling Company, 1,257 gallons; E. J. O'Brien Distilling Company, 2,500 gallons; and D. Sachs & Sons, 2,000 gallons, a total of 18,757 gallons.

The attorney for the liquor concerns stated it was his clients' intention to immediately to sell the tax paid liquor in their possession.

Wright & Taylor, the Brown-Forman Company and the Cincinnati Distilling Company, which were granted injunctions yesterday, to-day are disposing of their floor stocks of liquor in accordance with the permission of the court.

Application for a writ of superseas to stay the effect of the temporary injunction granted to Wright & Taylor and the Brown-Forman Company will be made as soon as possible by District Attorney W. V. Gregory.

J. M. Morgan Chinn, chief field deputy collector of internal revenue and today will continue to enforce so far as possible, the war-time prohibition law until we are told not to do so by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The collector, however, cannot molest the firms which are protected by the injunctions.

Federal Circuit Court Says War Is Not Ended

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—On the ground that the President alone can say when war with Germany ended, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed to-day sentence imposed on Lucien C. Laughter, Tarrant, Tex., convicted of selling liquor.

England Cheers 'Pussyfoot' As He Calls Hazing a 'Lark'

Students Who Mobbed American "Dry" Crusader Now Plan Banquet in His Honor; British Press Terms Him "Good Sport," "Brave Gentleman"

LONDON, Nov. 14.—William E. "Pussyfoot" Johnson, the American prohibition worker and Anti-Saloon League organizer, who yesterday was dragged from a platform and badly handled by the crowd while making a prohibition speech, discussed his experiences with a reporter to-day. He admitted that when he was first attacked he attempted to fight off the crowd, but that when he found it was only a students' lark he entered into the fun and enjoyed himself.

"The boys were all right," Mr. Johnson declared. "The police handled the situation well; if they had tried to force things a lot of people might have been hurt. I am sending this message to the students: 'You had a good time. I had a good time. I have no complaints, but if you want to get into the game against the greatest enemy of the human race—drink.'"

"Good Sport," British Verdict

As a result of the manner in which he bore his experience, Mr. Johnson to-day is one of the most talked of and best liked figures of British life. He is commended by the headlines in to-day's newspapers, and the general verdict of the headline writers was that he is "a good sport."

The students who marched about with him yesterday, upsetting traffic in a large part of the West End, now propose to tender Mr. Johnson a banquet and present him their tributes of respect.

The opposition to the Anti-Saloon League organization in London, it is said, has been based on the feeling that it was interfering with an American prohibitionist to come across seas to lecture the English on what they should do.

Mr. Johnson hopes, when the injury to his eye is better, to visit the college and address the students. The injury is said to have been caused by a missile thrown by an unknown person. Mr. Johnson was taken to a hospital to-day after an oculist had found the lens of the injured eye to be dislocated. The oculist ordered that Mr. Johnson be kept quiet until the extent of his injuries had been ascertained.

Baron Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor, speaking at a peace celebration dinner here to-night, referred to the Johnson incident and said it was proof to be repeated that a citizen of the United States should be subjected to such an outrage.

"Mr. Johnson," he said, "was invited here by an association of English people who share his views. He was as much entitled to express his opinion as the Lord Chancellor would be in the United States, if invited there by an American association."

Behaved As a Gentleman

"Assailed by overwhelming odds, Mr. Johnson did all a man could do to defend himself and, overwhelmed by numbers which should not be employed against a man of his age, he behaved as a sportsman, a gentleman and a brave citizen of the United States."

"Hereafter," added the Lord Chancellor, "however unpopular his views may be, Johnson need never fear but that he will obtain a fair hearing here."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—"Tremendous revolution" against the liquor traffic in Great Britain will result "from the cowardly assault of a mob of hoodlums" on W. E. "Pussyfoot" Johnson, the American Anti-Saloon League representative in England, said a statement issued here to-day by Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the board of temperance of the Methodist Church.

"Just a generation ago the American liquor trade was put on the toboggan by just such conduct," said Mr. Wilson. "This London mob has sealed their doom by attacking liquor traffic in Europe. It will intensify the determination of both American and British prohibitionists that the British people shall receive ample and correct information regarding the prohibition movement and its workings in America."

Victims of having violated in April, 1919, the Reed amendment and selective service act by taking liquor into Camp Dowie.

Counsel for Laughter argued that the war had ended before that time.

English Prince Real Diplomat At Washington

morial tree in front of Bancroft Hall, the royal visitor was entertained at luncheon by Admiral Scates.

Before going to Annapolis the prince purchased 100 Red Cross Christmas seals from Adrienne Mayer, the five-year-old health crusader, who recently was decorated by General Pershing for making a perfect score in the children's health crusade against disease.

The seal was the first made this year. The prince promised to use the seals on his personal letters.

"Starting facts on public health conditions were shown by the medical examination of millions of men during the war," said the prince. "These facts have demonstrated clearly the necessity of attacking harder than ever such enemies as tuberculosis. I am sure this world-wide work has the approval of every thoughtful person. The seals really represent the ounce of prevention. I wish the campaign all success."

At the door of the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, in Baltimore, where the prince called to see Cardinal Gibbons, the visitor was greeted by James Burns, a veteran of the Boer War and Hussars, "The Prince's Own." Burns told the prince he had formed one of the guard of honor at the wedding of his mother and father.

White Sulphur Springs Makes Plans for Prince

No Formal Activities, but Entire Resort Will Be Placed at His Disposal During Visit

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 14.—The Prince of Wales and his party will arrive here from Washington early to-morrow for a few days rest before going to New York next week. Breakfast will be served on the train, and the prince is expected to be at his hotel by 8 o'clock.

In deference to the wishes of the royal party there will be no formal activities in honor of the prince, but everything that this resort possesses has been placed at the disposal of the committee in charge of entertainment.

It is understood that the prince will be accompanied by the famous White Sulphur Springs golf links and will motor to Oakhurst, the estate of Russell W. Montague, in a community of Englishmen, to see the first golf links laid out in America.

Governor John J. Cornwell telegraphed from Charleston to-day notifying the local committee that he will be unable to meet the prince to-morrow, because of the pressure of executive business in connection with the strike. He delegated J. Howard Sloum, manager of the Greenbrier, 175 War Brides Reach U. S.

The transport President Grant, from Great Britain, arrived off Tompkinsville last night and will dock this morning at Hoboken. Among the passengers aboard are 175 war brides and nineteen children, fifteen of the latter being infants. The vessel also carries fifteen casual officers.

The Prince Will Visit Horse Show Wednesday

Rodman Wanamaker, chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Reception to Distinguished Guests, which will have charge of the city's part in the entertainment of the Prince of Wales, announced yesterday that on Wednesday afternoon the prince would not go to the Public Library, as had been originally planned, but would visit Madison Square Garden instead, where the Horse Show was then being held.

At 9 that morning there will be an investiture on board the Renown, followed by a reception at 11 and a lunch at 1 in honor of the Mayor's committee.

General Coleman Du Pont said yesterday that thirty delegates of the International Council, representing as many nationalities, would be received on the Renown by the prince next Tuesday afternoon. They will greet the British heir in the name of the members of their respective races in America.

Queens Librarians, Dissatisfied With Superiors, Resign

Assistant of the Ridgewood Branch Charges Unfitness and Favoritism; Answer Is Promised

Discontent which has been brewing in the Queens Borough Library Board has come to a head, it was learned yesterday, when it was announced at a meeting of the trustees that ten women employees of the body had resigned because of dissatisfaction with their superiors.

Among those who resigned is Miss Sarah Breitman, of 102 Decatur Street, assistant librarian of the Ridgewood Branch. In her letter of resignation she says she is leaving because several heads of departments are unfit and "much goes on of which the trustees are not aware."

Miss Breitman, questioned last night concerning her letter, said that in resigning she was protesting against the superiors she referred to in particular to one woman, who, she charged, had worked her way up to a position of responsibility by using undue influence with the members of the board of trustees.

Concerning her charge that irregularities are being committed by employees of the organization, she asserted that favoritism of the various branch librarians is permitted to violate all rules regarding punctuality and attendance to duties. Many, she said, are late and incur no reproof, and some are absent for no special reason yet escape punishment.

Miss Mabel L. Otis, superintendent of the library, refused to comment on "the affairs of the board," she said, "are now being investigated by the Commissioner of Accounts. His report will soon be completed. After this report is received a complete statement of our side of the case will be made by John H. Leich, president of the board of trustees. Under the circumstances I do not care to reply to any thing Miss Breitman may have said."

Prince's Sailor Robbed

John Forster, a seaman on the British warship, which is waiting in the Hudson River for the Prince of Wales, took a stroll on Eighth Avenue last night. Near Fortieth Street a man casually drew a revolver, fired at Forster and demanded his money.

The Britisher fell in with the customs of the strange land with alacrity and handed over $5.

Patrolman Kellerman, who had been watching proceedings with amazement, stepped in at this point. The hold-up man promptly vanished into the entrance of a tenement with the patrolman in hot pursuit. The chase led to the roof, where the fugitive was captured after the patrolman had fired two shots. He was taken to the West Thirty-seventh Street police station charged with robbery.

Steinway Left $50,000,000

Although the will of Charles Herman Steinway, president of Steinway & Sons, piano manufacturers, who died in the Surrogate's Court here yesterday that he left most of his estate to his wife, son and daughter. His estate, it is said, will amount to at least $50,000,000.

Fernando Solinger, who was attorney for Mr. Steinway, said yesterday that the filing of the piano man's will will be deferred until his cousin William H. Steinway, who is named as executor, arrives from abroad.

Straus Says Horton Keeps Milk Cost Up

committee not to believe stories of the high cost of pasteurization. He spoke briefly of his dealings with Loton Horton. He said he met him frequently years ago, during the controversy on pasteurization. He added that he had spoken to a milk man since.

"What I would do to Mr. Horton if he refused to help reduce the milk price wouldn't sound nice at all," Mr. Straus said.

Mr. Horton insisted last night that he had never discussed with Mr. Straus on the question of pasteurization. He declared that at the suggestion of the philanthropist he had made extensive experiments, the successful results of which have practically been the national pasteurization standards. He maintained that he was selling milk as reasonably as possible, and that he was prepared to do so in his power to assure the children of the poor a sufficient supply of milk. He cited his letter to Dr. Copeland, which was read at yesterday's meeting.

In this letter he told the commissioner that he did not have any plan to suggest which might immediately reduce the milk cost. He suggested, however, that the baby health stations of the Department of Health could be used as distribution centers for bottled milk, which he would sell to them at 12 cents a quart, 6 cents below the regular price. He asked that the milk bottles be either returned or paid for by the city, and suggested that the city sell the milk at even a lower price and stand the expense.

"You wanted some plan immediately to reduce the recently increased price of milk," his letter said in part. "I have suggested a plan. If I had known any way to meet $23,000 a week, over a million dollars a year, added to my labor pay and half a cent a quart added for every quart of milk I buy this month, other than adding it to my selling price, I would have done it."

"I perhaps ought to have said more than I have during the last year to my patrons by way of explanation and in answer to the falsehoods in the yellow press and more recently at public meetings by people who ought to know better."

Mr. Horton said in his letter that he was against regulated monopoly. Mr. Fox, vice-president of Borden's Farm Products Company, read to the company what he termed a rough draft of a plan for reducing the price of milk in this city. A regulated monopoly would do the trick, he said. He declared that his company would be ready to join in it and be assured a profit of one-half a cent a quart. The Borden company has not paid dividends in the two years in which it has been operated independent of Borden's Condensed Milk Company, and during one year it suffered actual losses, he said.

Mr. Fox said he was not certain just how much could be clipped off the milk price, but he thought the cost could be cut.

Mr. Mapes's suggestion for reducing the milk price embodied a complete upturn of the present system. He thought that refrigerated cars with tanks could take the place of the box cars and forty-quart cans of the present, while the milk could be sold in paper containers as at present.

Desires Drs. Copeland and Day, the committee members present included Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Disraeli, Captain Francis Martin of the Bronx, Assistant Corporation Counsel, Lee Kohns and Sophie Irene Loch.

Union Backs Community Council's Milk Boycott

The Central Federated Union last night adopted a resolution endorsing the milk boycott declared by the Community Council in the city. The resolution, it was said, is a suggestion to use milk only for essential purposes on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week.

On Tuesday night the parliament of the Community Council, made up of delegates from the eighty individual councils, adopted a resolution against the use of milk except for children on the first three days of each week. The matter is now being taken up by each council.

Countess Tolstoy, Widow of Famous Novelist, Dies

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Countess Leo Tolstoy, widow of the famous Russian novelist, died at Yasnaya Polyana, on November 4, according to a dispatch to "The Daily Mail" from Helsingfors, quoting the "Krasnaya Gazette."

Countess Tolstoy, before her marriage, was Sophia Behrs, the daughter of a fashionable doctor of Moscow. She was married to Count Tolstoy in 1862. Sixteen children were born to the couple. Although Tolstoy once characterized his wife as "by no means a trifler, but an earnest, practical, and did not carry her sympathy with his later sociological doctrines to the extent of sharing his ascetic mode of life, nor did he require it of her."

When Count Tolstoy became seriously ill just prior to his death in 1910 he was lying in a poorly heated room at a small village eighty miles from his estate at Yasnaya Polyana, attended by his daughter. He had expressed the wish that no one seek him out and Countess Tolstoy was only able to get to his bedside to visit him the night before he died.

In 1912 the Countess before her marriage was a pension of $5,000 a year, and in April, 1918, the Bolshevik government took away her estate at Yasnaya Polyana. Tolstoy for the maintenance of the family estate at Yasnaya Polyana.
